Outline:

Introduction to the Liberal Arts

- Sometimes of the most creative thoughts come not when you are thinking by yourself but when you are thinking in communion and conversation with other people.
- Students started to see that their teachers were continually engaged in a conversation about living a good Christian life in this world. Students are supposed to be brought into a conversation.
- Faculty who are friends brings students along. These strands of love, community, fellowship, and friendship come together when we work in the liberal arts tradition.
